17th SENATORIAL DISTRICT CONVENTION.

At the same time and place above designated in the respective towns and wards for meetings, to choose delegates to the county convention, the Republican electors of the wards of the city of Janesville, and of the towns in this county comprised in the 17th senatorial district, are requested to select an equal number of delegates to which they are entitled under the above appointment in the county convention, to represent them in a senatorial convention hereby called at the Court House in Janesville, on THURSDAY the 12th day of October next at 11 o'clock A. By order of the County Committee.

The adjourned Saratoga anti-Nebraska convention met at Auburn on Tuesday of last week, and adopted the whig state ticket. This manifests the possession of both "sense and honesty," by the anti-Nebraska men of New York, and will show its fruits hereafter.

The convention also passed a resolution to call a national convention at Syracuse next June to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The last returns from Maine report the election of Fuller, the present member, who voted against the Nebraska bill, in the 6th congressional district, by a plurality of 75. Two others, each anti-Nebraska, ran with him, and the majority against him will be nearly 2000.

A WHOLESALE BUSINESS.—The Waukesha Gazette says that a freight train ran through a flock of sheep, at the crossing of the railroad, near the burying ground in that village, and killed twenty-seven, and wounded several others. The sheep were owned by Dr. D. Ensign.

The know nothings of Cincinnati have had a regular flare up and many of its most influential members have broke the track. What it is all about we are sure we "don't know."

Merchandise for Janesville arrived at Milwaukee on the 29th for McKee & Bro., R. J. Richardson, J. T. Wright, J. A. Wood & Co., Pizar & Kimball.

J. R. Beale is receiving his fall and winter stock. Particulars will be given hereafter, as soon as he gets time after opening and shelving his goods.

Dr. John Mitchell lectures this evening before the Collegiate Institute. Subject: Discipline—the duty of parents and teachers.

The friends of Mr. Collins in Madison had a torch light procession Friday night in honor of his election.

We get news from Madison forty-eight hours old.—Mil. Free Dem.

Judge Douglass is continuing his travels through Illinois, holding meetings and making speeches at the principal places. Every meeting is a triumph, and his enemies are beginning to wish either he or they had never been born. Green Bay Advocate.

Some of the northern papers are chronicling the first appearance of frost in their region.—This paragraph of the Advocate would lead one think it was mid-winter in Green Bay.

A magnificent cathedral is about being erected in Washington by the Methodists. It is to be one of the most costly and elegantly finished church edifices on the continent. Rev. Henry Slicer superintends the finances, and the cornerstone will be laid on the 23d of Oct. next.

The Millerites have been holding a series of meetings at Syracuse, and have now fixed on the 19th of May, 1855, as the day when the world will positively come to an end.

It is understood that the Drovers' Bank and the Bank of Carthage, New York, recently suspended, will be reconstituted within a few days. Parties holding notes of these institutions should not sacrifice them.

Justice.—Henry Gauvin, a compositor on the Sicile newspaper in Paris, who shot and killed the Abby Gay, near the church of St. Vincent de Paul, in April last, for improper connection with his wife, while officiating as her spiritual adviser, was tried a few days since, and acquitted by the jury in ten minutes.

MESSES. EDITORS:—In noticing a few remarks in your paper relative to a lecture that was delivered the other evening by G. S. Dodge, Esq., before the members of the Collegiate Institute on the subject of the "proper course of reading" for students, we are led into the field of discussion ourselves, to give our views touching some of the principal features of that lecture; and in doing this, we wish to be understood as being entirely aloof from all partiality regarding the merits, or—if it has any—demerits of the same.

To prescribe a proper course of reading for any class of men, is like unto one man prescribing his opinion for another, and is no light task; but to suit the tastes of the majority of that class is difficult in the extreme, and few there be that accomplish it. For inasmuch as men's opinions differ the one from the other, precisely in the same degree do their various views of works. This subject has been discussed by some of the greatest men that grace the pages of our literature, and has been found to be so difficult to treat upon, and find that due appreciation which it ought to receive, that but few have left us any exact rule to follow. Indeed, Johnson, Chesterfield, and Channing, are the only authors that have dwelt considerably on the subject and we are inclined to the opinion that had our friend G. S. Dodge, Esq., chosen other ground to have displayed his ability as a lecturer, we think he would have been more at home and given greater satisfaction to his audience; or had he confined himself within reasonable limits, and selected a few choice books that were most familiar to himself, and such as he could recommend as being suited to the student from among his innumerable collection of authors, and have placed them methodically before the notice of his hearers, he might then have met the desired end and have conferred instruction, instead of wading up to the chin in such deep water, and by an endless chain and repetition of authors, confused the attention of his hearers and vitiated the entire subject. But if it was barely the object of our lecturer to name over a mass of works, irrespective of classification, and leave the student to group among and select for himself out of them his own choice of works for his own instruction, why then we think the lecturer had good taste in selecting his library—(although) we should be inclined to have recommended one or two more works that no doubt would have been equally appreciated by the student—as Dick's works, Goldsmith's histories of England, Rome and Greece; Chesterfield's letters, and Gray's Elegy, and perhaps Josephus—books that are particularly mentioned in the selection given by Johnson and others.) But we understand, at least we should hope, the intention of these lectures to be a criterion for the young, and therefore all possible care should be taken not to vitiate their taste for reading, and great pains taken in avoiding those authors entirely unsuited to the minds of youth, as Byron, Shelley, Holmes, and the like. These are all very well in adult years when the mind is prepared to receive them, but are certainly unfit books for the young. Nor do we think Locke on the Human Understanding a proper book, suited to the capacity of the youth, nor Shakespeare, till after a preparatory course of reading has been gone through.

But time will not permit us to pursue this subject any further, and suffice it to say, that although we must express our unqualified disapprobation to some of the phrases made use of by the lecturer, as "sticking to a book with the tenacity of a bull-dog," "fast women," "town keepers," "members of congress," etc., as being entirely out of place on a subject of this kind, and not according to our taste, exactly "elegant or dignified in style"—we should prefer seeing the same lecture in a more concentrated form, and have prescribed in more definite limits the books for a proper course of reading.

Yours, SPECTATOR.

The following, perhaps too florid, yet beautifully written description, first appeared in the North Carolina Republican. It is from the pen of a young lady, formerly resident in this city:

A WISCONSIN PRAIRIE.—Reader, have you never beheld a Badger State prairie? Then go, and view one of nature's sublimest handi-works. Go, and rest your eye, not upon a dead level as many imagine, but upon, as it were, a variegated, heaving sea, whose undulating agitated waters are just calming themselves in smothered swells. Place yourself on the largest one of these, it is well worth your effort, and observe the gentle undulations gradually growing smaller and smaller like receding waves. So perfectly formed you can hardly believe they are not waves, covered as they are, with tall "breeze-riden" herbage, and as free from bush or tree as the sea itself, except here and there a circular grove of white oaks and silver leaf poplar, which seem to have drawn up their forces in this form to better withstand the attack of the fire, which annually blasts the oakish aspirations of many a sprouting acorn. By the side of one of these prairie islands, to make the picture of the sea still more complete, you see, what is it? a marine animal? It is very like one, with its rounded back just discernible in the tops of the high grass, but as it raises its head and bounds away in terror you at once recognize the timid fawn, and as to its speed it seems to add wings as it rapidly ascends over the summit of each receding hillock, you can but imagine it borne away on the "proud waves" crest.

Turning from this horizon bounded prospect you behold on the other hand, a lazily winding sheet of water, with the blue sky mirrored on its bosom, coming from way off yonder beyond the reach of your keenest sight, and shaping the course of its broad surface around every little hill, which a noisy New England creek would scornfully dash over. Yet this majestic river, (I am speaking of the noble Rock,) in its easy complacent dignity holds the even tenor of its way, until it disappears as it came, pitching over no precipice, circling through no narrow, acknowledging no shallows and chafing over no rocks, but bearing on its calm yet restless current to the great valley river. Numerous flocks of the feathered tribe dot its borders, and from the narrow skirting of woodland comes the too booo woe of the prairie hen, the drumming of the partridge, the shrill note of the thrush, the cry of the whip-poor-will, the plaintive song of the mourning dove with the double bass of monsieur frog, and the intense tenor of the screech owl, while flapping his wings over all these, and striking terror into every heart, soars our nation's emblem, the bald eagle.

Besides all this, there are the beautiful and fragrant flowers with which nature forgets not to embellish the picture. There are large clusters of blue forget-me-nots, the climbing honeysuckle, the haughty columbine, the morning glory, the blushing beauty, the "yellow daisy by the mill" content "to be a daisy still and nothing more;" then there is the untidy pond lily, arise us at trop negligie; there are pink and white catch flies, whose innocent little petals have never caught anything save the "tears of night," or the approaching kiss of the honey bee; there are thousands of cupid's darts hurling away at each other for want of human victims; there, coquetry unveils her black eyes in the disc of the none-so-pretty; modesty hides under the hood of the anemone; there, purity dwells in the bell of the lily, and there too in all its native loveliness, is the emblem of youth, beauty and sweetness, the prairie rose.

These viewed through an atmosphere soft and hazy, with senses intoxicated by draughts of distilled fragrance, calls forth from the inmost soul a feeling of admiration, which we

"Can never express yet cannot all conceal." Such is the appearance of our prairies in general, and such in particular was the appearance, from Mount Zion, of Rock prairie, now one of the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of the west. No traveler could pass over Mount Zion without pausing to gaze longer on the scene, till his full soul turning from the picture to its great artist would exclaim, "thou God hast created it! It is indeed good!" TRAVELER.

YANKEE CELEBRITY VS. ENGLISH SLOWNESS.—The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, referring to the slowness and torpidity manifested by the allied troops in the campaign against Russia, contrasts it with the brilliancy of manoeuvre and the energy of action of our own troops in the Mexican campaign:

The sluggishness of the movement of the allies does not compare favorably with the activity displayed by General Scott on the expedition against the Mexican capital—an expedition which was directed at about as great a distance from, and in a yet hotter and sicker climate.—On the 7th of March, General Scott embarked with his troops on board the transporting squadron; on the 27th of the same month, Vera Cruz, with the strong castle of San Juan d'Ulloa, was ours, besides 5000 prisoners and 500 pieces of artillery. Within three weeks after the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Perote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession. Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and Gen. Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

When a bank suspends in Australia, they take the president to a neighboring tree and serve him in the same manner.

MATHEWS' CELEBRATED VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE, OF ONE PREPARATION.

THE article manufactured under the above title, is entirely different from and possesses characteristics of excellence not known to any other Hair Dye in use, viz.

SAFETY. It is entirely free from all injurious properties in its application—not injuring or even impairing the gloss or texture of the finest and most delicate hair.

VARIETY AND BEAUTY OF COLOR. Any shade can be produced from a Light Brown to a Jet Black; restoring Gray Hair to its original color, and matching Light or Red Hair with any desired shade, which will not Fade, Croak, or wash out, leaving the hair soft and in appearance perfectly natural.

CONVENIENCE. This Dye is put up in one bottle, and in this way avoids the inconvenience of having two or three separate liquids to apply, which is very perplexing, and a slight mistake as to the proper time of applying these separate liquids always defeats the end desired.

CHEAPNESS, &c. This is the cheapest Liquid Hair Dye in use, the bottle containing double that of any other manufacturer, besides being sold at half the price. It will not color the skin, proper attention being paid to the simple directions accompanying each bottle.

BROUGHT HOME TO THE DOOR OF THE MILLION.

A wonderful discovery has recently been made by Dr. Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of consumption, asthma and all diseases of the lung. We refer to "Dr. Curtis' Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment, a physician remarks: "It is evident that inhaling—constantly breathing an agreeable, healing vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the arial cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists' throughout the country.—New York Dutchman of Jan. 14.

The Inhaler is worn on the breast under the linen without the least inconvenience—the heat of the body being sufficient to evaporate the fluid.

Hundreds of CASES OF CURES like the following might be named. One Package of Hygeana has cured me of the ASTHMA of six years standing.—Jas. F. Kesberry, P. M. of Duncannon, Pa.

I am cured of the ASTHMA of 10 years standing by Dr. Curtis' Hygeana.—Margaret Eadson, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Paul of No. 5 Mammont St., N. Y., was cured of a severe case of Bronchitis by the Hygeana.

My sister has been cured of a DISTRESSING COUGH of several years standing, and decided to be incurable by her Physicians. She was CURED IN ONE MONTH by the Hygeana.—J. H. Gubert, P. M., Richmond, Me.

Price three Dollars a Package.—Sold by CURTIS & PERKINS and BOYD & PAUL No. 149 Chambers St., N. Y.—4 Packages sent free by express to any part of the United States for Ten Dollars.

N. B.—Dr. Curtis' Hygeana is the ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE ARTICLE, all others are base imitations or vile and INJURIOUS counterfeits. Shun them as you would POISON.

17th SENATORIAL DISTRICT CONVENTION.

At the same time and place above designated in the respective towns and wards for meetings, to choose delegates to the county convention, the Republican electors of the wards of the city of Janesville, and of the towns in this county comprised in the 17th senatorial district, are requested to select an equal number of delegates to which they are entitled under the above appointment in the county convention, to represent them in a senatorial convention hereby called at the Court House in Janesville, on THURSDAY the 12th day of October next at 11 o'clock, A. By order of the County Committee.

The adjourned Saratoga anti-Nebraska convention met at Auburn on Tuesday of last week, and adopted the whig state ticket. This manifests the possession of both "sense and honesty," by the anti-Nebraska men of New York, and will show its fruits hereafter.

The convention also passed a resolution to call a national convention at Syracuse next June to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The last returns from Maine report the election of Fuller, the present member, who voted against the Nebraska bill, in the 6th congressional district, by a plurality of 75. Two others, each anti-Nebraska, ran with him, and the majority against him will be nearly 2000.

A WHOLESALE BUSINESS.—The Waukesha Gazette says that a freight train ran through a flock of sheep, at the crossing of the railroad, near the burying ground in that village, and killed twenty-seven, and wounded several others. The sheep were owned by Dr. D. Ensign.

The know nothings of Cincinnati have had a regular flare up and many of its most influential members have broke the track. What it is all about we are sure we "don't know."

Justice.—Henry Gauvin, a compositor on the Sicile newspaper in Paris, who shot and killed the Abby Gay, near the church of St. Vincent de Paul, in April last, for improper connection with his wife, while officiating as her spiritual adviser, was tried a few days since, and acquitted by the jury in ten minutes.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In noticing a few remarks in your paper relative to a lecture that was delivered the other evening by G. S. Dodge, Esq., before the members of the Collegiate Institute on the subject of the "proper course of reading" for students, we are led into the field of discussion ourselves, to give our views touching some of the principal features of that lecture; and in doing this, we wish to be understood as being entirely aloof from all partiality regarding the merits, or—if it has any—demerits of the same.

To prescribe a proper course of reading for any class of men, is like unto one man prescribing his opinion for another, and is no light task; but to suit the tastes of the majority of that class is difficult in the extreme, and few there be that accomplish it. For inasmuch as men's opinions differ the one from the other, precisely in the same degree do their various views of works. This subject has been discussed by some of the greatest men that grace the pages of our literature, and has been found to be so difficult to treat upon, and find that due appreciation which it ought to receive, that few have left us any exact rule to follow. Indeed, Johnson, Chesterfield, and Channing, are the only authors that have dwelt considerably on the subject and we are inclined to the opinion that had our friend G. S. Dodge, Esq., chosen other ground to have displayed his ability as a lecturer, we think he would have been more at home and given greater satisfaction to his audience; or had he confined himself within reasonable limits, and selected a few choice books that were the most familiar to himself, and such as he could recommend as being suited to the student from among his innumerable collection of authors, and have placed them methodically before the notice of his hearers, he might then have met the desired end and have conferred instruction, instead of wading up to the chin in such deep water, and by an endless chain and repetition of authors, confused the attention of his hearers and vitiated the entire subject. But if it was barely the object of our lecturer to name over a mass of works, irrespective of classification, and leave the student to group among and select for himself out of them his own choice of works for his own instruction, why then we think the lecturer had good taste in selecting his library—(although) we should be inclined to have recommended one or two more works that no doubt would have been equally appreciated by the student—as Dick's works, Goldsmith's histories of England, Rome and Greece; Chesterfield's letters, and Gray's Elegy, and perhaps Josephus—books that are particularly mentioned in the selection given by Johnson and others.) But we understand, at least we should hope, the intention of these lectures to be a criterion for the young, and therefore all possible care should be taken not to vitiate their taste for reading, and great pains taken in avoiding those authors entirely unsuited to the minds of youth, as Byron, Shelley, Holmes, and the like. These are all very well in adult years when the mind is prepared to receive them, but are certainly unfit books for the young. Nor do we think Locke on the Human Understanding a proper book, suited to the capacity of the youth, nor Shakespeare, till after a preparatory course of reading has been gone through.

But time will not permit us to pursue this subject any further, and suffice it to say, that although we must express our unqualified disapprobation to some of the phrases made use of by the lecturer, as "sticking to a book with the tenacity of a bull-dog," "fast women," "town keepers," "members of congress," etc., as being entirely out of place on a subject of this kind, and not according to our taste, exactly "elegant or dignified in style"—we should prefer seeing the same lecture in a more concentrated form, and have prescribed in more definite limits the books for a proper course of reading.

Yours, SPECTATOR.

The following, perhaps too florid, yet beautifully written description, first appeared in the North Carolina Republican. It is from the pen of a young lady, formerly resident in this city:

A WISCONSIN PRAIRIE.—Reader, have you never beheld a Badger State prairie? Then go, and view one of nature's sublimest handi-works. Go, and rest your eye, not upon a dead level as many imagine, but upon, as it were, a variegated, heaving sea, whose recently agitated waters are just calming themselves in smothered swells. Place yourself on the largest one of these, it is well worth your effort, and observe the gentle undulations gradually growing smaller and smaller like receding waves. So perfectly formed you can hardly believe they are not waves, covered as they are, with tall "breeze-riden" herbage, and as free from bush or tree as the sea itself, except here and there a circular grove of white oaks and silver leaf poplar, which seem to have drawn up their forces in this form to better withstand the attack of the fire, which annually blasts the oakish aspirations of many a sprouting acorn. By the side of one of these prairie islands, to make the picture of the sea still more complete, you see, what is it? A marine animal? It is very like one, with its rounded back just discernible in the tops of the high grass, but as it raises its head and bounds away in terror to once recognize the timid fawn, and to its speed it seems to add wings as it rapidly skims over the summit of each receding hillock, you can but imagine it borne away on the "proud waves" crest.

Turning from this horizon bounded prospect you behold on the other hand, a lazily winding sheet of water, with the blue sky mirrored on its bosom, coming from way off yonder beyond the reach of your keenest sight, and shaping the course of its broad surface around every little hill, which a noisy New England creek would scornfully dash over. Yet this majestic river, (I am speaking of the noble Rock), in its easy contentment digresses the even tenor of its way, until it disappears as it came, pitching over no precipice, cringing through no narrow, acknowledging no shallows and chafing over no rocks, but bearing on its calm yet restless current to the great valley river. Numerous flocks of the feathered tribe dot its borders, and from the narrow skirting of woodland comes the too woo-woo of the prairie hen, the drumming of the partridge, the shrill note of the thrush, the cry of the whip-poor-will, the plaintive song of the mourning dove with the double bass of monsieur frog, and the intense tenor of the screech owl, while flapping his wings over all these, and striking terror into every heart, soars our nation's emblem, the bald eagle.

Besides all this, there are the beautiful and fragrant flowers with which nature forgot not to embellish the picture. There are large clusters of blue forget-me-nots, the climbing honeysuckle, the haughty columbine, the morning glory, the blushing beauty, the "yellow daisy by the mill," content "to be a daisy still and nothing more," then there is the untidy pond lily, orice un at trop negligé; there are pink and white catch flies, whose innocent little petale have never caught anything save the "tears of night," or the approaching kiss of the honey bee; there are thousands of cupid's darts hurled away at each other for want of human victims; there, coquetry unveils her black eyes in the disc of the none-so-pretty; modesty hides under the hood of the anemone; there, purity dwells in the bell of the lily, and there too in all its native loveliness, is the emblem of youth, beauty and sweetness, the prairie rose.

These viewed through an atmosphere soft and hazy, with senses intoxicated by draughts of distilled fragrance, calls forth from the inmost soul a feeling of admiration, which we

"Can never express yet cannot all conceal." Such is the appearance of our prairies in general, and such in particular was the appearance, from Mount Zion, of Rock prairie, now one of the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of the west. No traveler could pass over Mount Zion without pausing to gaze longer on the scene, till his full soul turning from the picture to its great artist would exclaim, "thou God hast created it! It is indeed good!" TRAVELER.

YANKEE CELIBACY VS. ENGLISH SLOWNESS.—The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, referring to the slowness and torpidity manifested by the allied troops in the campaign against Russia, contrasts it with the brilliancy of manoeuvre and the energy of action of our own troops in the Mexican campaign:

The sluggishness of the movement of the allies does not compare favorably with the activity displayed by General Scott on the expedition against the Mexican capital—an expedition which was directed at about as great a distance from, and in a yet hotter and sicker climate. On the 7th of March, General Scott embarked with his troops on board the transporting squadron; on the 27th of the same month, Vera Cruz, with the strong castle of San Juan d'Ulloa, was ours, besides 5000 prisoners and 500 pieces of artillery. Within three weeks after the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Perote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession.

Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within as many more it was broke by the Mexicans, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and Gen. Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

When a bank suspends in Australia, they take the president to a neighboring tree and serve him in the same manner.

17th SENATORIAL DISTRICT CONVENTION.

At the same time and place above designated in the respective towns and wards for meetings, to choose delegates to the county convention, the Republican electors of the wards of the city of Janesville, and of the towns in this county comprised in the 17th senatorial district, are requested to send an equal number of delegates to which they are entitled under the above appointment in the county convention, to represent them in a senatorial convention hereby called at the Court House in Janesville, on THURSDAY the 12th day of October next at 11 o'clock, A. M., to nominate a candidate for senator.

By order of the County Committee.

The adjourned anti-Nebraska convention met at Auburn on Tuesday of last week, and adopted the whig state ticket. This manifests the possession of both "sense and honesty," by the anti-Nebraska men of New York, and will show its fruits hereafter.

The convention also passed a resolution to call a national convention at Syracuse next June to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The last returns from Maine report the election of Fuller, the present member, who voted against the Nebraska bill, in the 6th congressional district, by a plurality of 75. Two others, each anti-Nebraska, ran with him, and the majority against him will be nearly 2000.

A WHOLESALE BUSINESS.—The Waukesha Gazette says that a freight train ran through a flock of sheep, at the crossing of the railroad, near the burying ground in that village, and killed twenty-seven, and wounded several others. The sheep were owned by Dr. D. Ensign.

The know nothings of Cincinnati have had a regular flare up and many of its most influential members have broke the track. What it is all about we are sure we "don't know."

Merchandise for Janesville arrived at Milwaukee on the 29th for McKee & Bro., R. J. Richardson, J. T. Wright, J. A. Wood & Co., Pixley & Kimball.

J. R. Beale is receiving his fall and winter stock. Particulars will be given hereafter, as soon as he gets time after opening and sheiving his goods.

Dr. John Mitchell lectures this evening before the Collegiate Institute. Subject: Discipline—the duty of parents and teachers.

The friends of Mr. Collins in Madison had a torch light procession Friday night in honor of his election.

Even at that you sometimes beat us, as we frequently see our Madison items first in the Milwaukee papers.

Judge Douglass is continuing his travels through Illinois, holding meetings and making speeches at the principal places. Every meeting is a triumph, and his enemies are beginning to wish either he or they had never been born.

Some of the northern papers are chronicling the first appearance of frost in their region.—This paragraph of the Advocate would lead one think it was mid-winter in Green Bay.

A magnificent cathedral is about being erected in Washington by the Methodists. It is to be one of the most costly and elegantly finished church edifices on the continent. Rev. Henry Slicer superintends the finances, and the corner stone will be laid on the 28th of Oct. next.

The Millerites have been holding a series of meetings at Syracuse, and have now fixed on the 19th of May, 1855, as the day when the world will positively come to an end.

It is understood that the Drovers' Bank and the Bank of Carthage, New York, recently suspended, will be reconstituted within a few days. Parties holding notes of these institutions should not sacrifice them.

Justice.—Henry Gauvin, a compositor on the Siele newspaper in Paris, who shot and killed the Abby Gay, near the church of St. Vincent de Paul, in April last, for improper conduct with his wife, while officiating as her spiritual adviser, was tried a few days since, and acquitted by the jury in ten minutes.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In noticing a few remarks in your paper relative to a lecture that was delivered the other evening by G. S. Dodge, Esq., before the members of the Collegiate Institute on the subject of the "proper course of reading" for students, we are led into the field of discussion ourselves, to give our views touching some of the principal features of that lecture; and in doing this, we wish to be understood as being entirely aloof from all partiality regarding the merits, or—if it has any—demerits of the same.

To prescribe a proper course of reading for any class of men, is like unto one man prescribing his opinion for another, and is no light task; but to suit the tastes of the majority of that class is difficult in the extreme, and few there be that accomplish it. For inasmuch as men's opinions differ the one from the other, precisely in the same degree do their various views of works. This subject has been discussed by some of the greatest men that grace the pages of our literature, and has been found to be so difficult to treat upon, and find that due appreciation which it ought to receive, that but few have left us any exact rule to follow.

Indeed, Johnson, Chesterfield, and Channing, are the only authors that have dwelt considerably on the subject and we are inclined to the opinion that had our friend G. S. Dodge, Esq., chosen other ground to have displayed his ability as a lecturer, we think he would have been more at home and given greater satisfaction to his audience; or had he confined himself within reasonable limits, and selected a few choice books that were the most familiar to himself, and such as he could recommend as being suited to the student from among his innumerable collection of authors, and have placed them methodically before the notice of his hearers, he might then have met the desired end and have conferred instruction, instead of wading up to the chin in such deep water, and by an endless chain and repetition of authors, confused the attention of his hearers and vitiated the entire subject. But if it was barely the object of our lecturer to name over a mass of works, irrespective of classification, and leave the student to group among and select for himself out of them his own choice of works for his own instruction, why then we think the lecturer had good taste in selecting his library.—(although we should be inclined to have recommended one or two more works that no doubt would have been equally appreciated by the student—as Dick's works, Goldsmith's histories of England, Rome and Greece; Chesterfield's letters, and Gray's Elegy, and perhaps Josephus—books that are particularly mentioned in the selection given by Johnson and others.) But we understand, at least we should hope, the intention of these lectures to be a criterion for the young, and therefore all possible care should be taken not to vitiate their taste for reading, and great pains taken in avoiding those authors entirely unsuited to the minds of youth, as Byron, Shelley, Holmes, and the like. These are all very well in adult years when the mind is prepared to receive them, but are certainly unfit books for the young. Nor do we think Locke on the Human Understanding a proper book, suited to the capacity of the youth, nor Shakespeare, till after a preparatory course of reading has been gone through.

But time will not permit us to pursue this subject any further, and suffice it to say, that although we must express our unqualified disapprobation to some of the phrases made use of by the lecturer, as "slinking to a book with the tenacity of a bull-dog," "fast women," "town keepers," "members of congress," etc., as being entirely out of place on a subject of this kind, and not according to our taste, exactly "elegant or dignified in style"—we should prefer seeing the same lecture in a more concentrated form, and have prescribed in more definite limits the books for a proper course of reading.

Yours, SPECTATOR.

The following, perhaps too florid, yet beautifully written description, first appeared in the North Carolina Republican. It is from the pen of a young lady, formerly resident in this city:

A WISCONSIN PRAIRIE.—Reader, have you never beheld a Badger State prairie? Then go, and view one of nature's sublimest handi-works. Go, and rest your eye, not upon a dead level as many imagine, but upon, as it were, a variegated, heaving sea; whose recently agitated waters are just calming themselves in smothered swells. Place yourself on the largest one of these, it is well worth your effort, and observe the gentle undulations gradually growing smaller and smaller like receding waves. So perfectly formed you can hardly believe they are not waves, covered as they are, with tall "breeze-riden" herbage, and as free from bush or tree as the sea itself, except here and there a circular grove of white oaks and silver leaf poplar, which seem to have drawn up their forces in this form to better withstand the attack of the fire, which annually blasts the oakish aspirations of many a sprouting acorn. By the side of one of these prairie islands, to make the picture of the sea still more complete, you see, what is it? a marine animal? It is very like one, with its rounded back just discernible in the tops of the high grass, but as it raises its head and bounds away in terror you at once recognize the timid fawn, and as you speed it seems to add wings as it rapidly eludes over the summit of each receding hillock, you can but imagine it borne away on the "proud waves' crest."

Turning from this horizon bounded prospect you behold on the other hand, a lazily winding sheet of water, with the blue sky mirrored on its bosom, coming from way off yonder beyond the reach of your keenest sight, and shaping the course of its broad surface around every little hill, which a noisy New England creek would scornfully dash over. Yet this majestic river, (I am speaking of the noble Rock,) in its easy complacent dignity holds the even tenor of its way, until it disappears as it came, pitching over no precipice, edging through no narrows, acknowledging no shallows and chafing over no rocks, but bearing on its calm yet resistless current to the great valley river. Numerous flocks of the feathered tribe dot its borders, and from the narrow skirting of woodland comes the too booo woo of the prairie hen, the drumming of the partridge, the shrill note of the thrush, the cry of the whip-poor-will, the plaintive song of the mourning dove with the double bass of mousieer frog, and the intense tenor of the screech owl, while flapping his wings over all these, and striking terror into every heart, soars our nation's emblem, the bald eagle.

Besides all this, there are the beautiful and fragrant flowers with which nature forgot not to embellish the picture. There are large clusters of blue forget-me-nots, the climbing honeysuckle, the haughty columbine, the morning glory, the blushing beauty, the "yellow daisy by the mill," content "to be a daisy still and nothing more;" then there is the untidy pond lily, oreo ai trop negligie; there are pink and white catch flies, whose innocent little petals have never caught anything save the "tears of night," or the approaching kiss of the honey bee; there are thousands of cupid's darts hurrying away at each other for want of human victims; there, coquetry unveils her black eyes in the disc of the none-so-pettry; modesty hides under the hood of the anemone; there, purity dwells in the bell of the lily, and there too in all its native loveliness, is the emblem of youth, beauty and sweetness, the prairie rose.

These viewed through an atmosphere soft and hazy, with senses intoxicated by draughts of distilled fragrance, calls forth from the inmost soul a feeling of admiration, which we

"Can ne'er express yet cannot all conceal."

Such is the appearance of our prairies in general, and such in particular was the appearance, from Mount Zion, of Rock prairie, now one of the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of the west. No traveler could pass over Mount Zion without pausing to gaze longer on the scene, till his full soul turning from the picture to its great artist! would exclaim, "thou God hast created it! It is indeed good!"

YANKEE CELERITY VS. ENGLISH SLOWNESS.—The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, referring to the slowness and torpidity manifested by the allied troops in the campaign against Russia, contrasts it with the brilliancy of manœuvre and the energy of action of our own troops in the Mexican campaign:

The sluggishness of the movement of the allies does not compare favorably with the activity displayed by General Scott on the expedition against the Mexican capitol—an expedition which was directed at about as great a distance from, and in a yet hotter and sicker climate.—On the 7th of March, General Scott embarked with his troops on board the transporting squadron; on the 27th of the same month, Vera Cruz, with the strong castle of San Juan d'Ulloa, was ours, besides 5000 prisoners and 500 pieces of artillery. Within three weeks after the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Perote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession. Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within a few more it was broke by the Mexicans, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and Gen. Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

When a bank suspends in Australia, they take the president to a neighboring tree and serve him in the same manner.

By order of the County Committee.

The adjourned Saratoga anti-Nebraska convention met at Auburn on Tuesday of last week, and adopted the whig state ticket. This manifests the possession of both "sense and honesty," by the anti-Nebraska men of New York, and will show its fruits hereafter.

The convention also passed a resolution to call a national convention at Syracuse next June to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The last returns from Maine report the election of Fuller, the present member, who voted against the Nebraska bill, in the 6th congressional district, by a plurality of 75. Two others, each anti-Nebraska, ran with him, and the majority against him will be nearly 2000.

A WHOLESALE BUSINESS.—The Waukesha Gazette says that a freight train ran through a flock of sheep, at the crossing of the railroad, near the burying ground in that village, and killed twenty-seven, and wounded several others. The sheep were owned by Dr. D. Ensign.

The know nothings of Cincinnati have had a regular flare up and many of its most influential members have broke the track. What it is all about we are sure we "don't know."

Even at that you sometimes beat us, as we frequently see our Madison items first in the Milwaukee papers.

Judge Douglass is continuing his travels through Illinois, holding meetings and making speeches at the principal places. Every meeting is a triumph, and his enemies are beginning to wish either he or they had never been born. Green Bay Advocate.

Some of the northern papers are chronicling the first appearance of frost in their region.—This paragraph of the Advocate would lead one think it was mid-winter in Green Bay.

A magnificent cathedral is about being erected in Washington by the Methodists. It is to be one of the most costly and elegantly finished church edifices on the continent. Rev. Henry Slater superintends the finances, and the cornerstone will be laid on the 23d of Oct. next.

The Millerites have been holding a series of meetings at Syracuse, and have now fixed on the 19th of May, 1855, as the day when the world will positively come to an end.

It is understood that the Drovers' Bank and the Bank of Carthage, New York, recently suspended, will be reconstituted within a few days. Parties holding notes of these institutions should not sacrifice them.

JUSTICE.—Henry Gauvin, a compositor on the Steele newspaper in Paris, who shot and killed the Abby Gay, near the church of St. Vincent de Paul, in April last, for improper connection with his wife, while officiating as her spiritual adviser, was tried a few days since, and acquitted by the jury in ten minutes.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In noticing a few remarks in your paper relative to a lecture that was delivered the other evening by G. S. Dodge, Esq., before the members of the Collegiate Institute on the subject of the "proper course of reading" for students, we are led into the field of discussion ourselves, to give our views touching some of the principal features of that lecture; and in doing this, we wish to be understood as being entirely aloof from all partiality regarding the merits, or—if it has any—demerits of the same.

To prescribe a proper course of reading for any class of men, is like unto one man prescribing his opinion for another, and is no light task; but to suit the tastes of the majority of that class is difficult in the extreme, and few there be that accomplish it. For inasmuch as men's opinions differ the one from the other, precisely in the same degree do their various views of works. This subject has been discussed by some of the greatest men that grace the pages of our literature, and has been found to be so difficult to treat upon, and find that duo appreciation which it ought to receive, that but few have left us any exact rule to follow. Indeed, Johnson, Chesterfield, and Channing, are the only authors that have dwelt considerably on the subject and we are inclined to the opinion that had our friend G. S. Dodge, Esq., chosen other ground to have displayed his ability as a lecturer, we think he would have been more at home and given greater satisfaction to his audience; or had he confined himself within reasonable limits, and selected a few choice books that were the most familiar to himself, and such as he could recommend as being suited to the student from among his innumerable collection of authors, and have placed them methodically before the notice of his hearers, he might then have met the desired end and have conferred instruction, instead of wading up to the chin in such deep water, and by an endless chain and repetition of authors, confused the attention of his hearers and vitiated the entire subject. But if it was barely the object of our lecturer to name over a mass of works, irrespective of classification, and leave the student to group among and select for himself out of them his own choice of works for his own instruction, why then we think the lecturer had good taste in selecting his library—(although) we should be inclined to have recommended one or two more works that no doubt would have been equally appreciated by the student—as Dick's works, Goldsmith's histories of England, Rome and Greece; Chesterfield's letters, and Gray's Elegy, and perhaps Josephus—books that are particularly mentioned in the selection given by Johnson and others.) But we understand, at least we should hope, the intention of these lectures to be a criterion for the young, and therefore all possible care should be taken not to vitiate their taste for reading, and great pains taken in avoiding those authors entirely unsuited to the minds of youth, as Byron, Shelley, Holmes, and the like. These are all very well in adult years when the mind is prepared to receive them, but are certainly unfit books for the young. Nor do we think Locke on the Human Understanding a proper book, suited to the capacity of the youth, nor Shakespeare, till after a preparatory course of reading has been gone through.

But time will not permit us to pursue this subject any further, and suffice it to say, that although we must express our unqualified disapprobation to some of the phrases made use of by the lecturer, as "sticking to a book with the tenacity of a bull-dog," "fast women," "town keepers," "members of congress," etc., as being entirely out of place on a subject of this kind, and not according to our taste, exactly "elegant or dignified in style"—we should prefer seeing the same lecture in a more concentrated form, and have prescribed in more definite limits the books for a proper course of reading.

Yours, SPECTATOR.

The following, perhaps too florid, yet beautifully written description, first appeared in the North Carolina Republican. It is from the pen of a young lady, formerly resident in this city:

A WISCONSIN PRAIRIE.—Reader, have you never beheld a Badger State prairie? Then go, and view one of nature's sublime handi-works. Go, and rest your eye, not upon a dead level as many imagine, but upon, as it were, a variegated, heaving sea, whose recently agitated waters are just calming themselves in smothered swells. Place yourself on the largest one of these, it is well worth your effort, and observe the gentle undulations gradually growing smaller and smaller like receding waves. So perfectly formed you can hardly believe they are not waves, covered as they are, with tall "broeze-riden" herbage, and as free from bush or tree as the sea itself, except here and there a circular grove of white oaks and silver leaf poplar, which seem to have drawn up their forces in this form to better withstand the attack of the fire, which annually blasts the oakish aspirations of many a sprouting acorn. By the side of one of these prairie islands, to make the picture of the sea still more complete, you see, what is it? a marine animal? It is very like one, with its rounded back just discernible in the tops of the high grass, but as it raises its head and bounds away in terror you at once recognize the timid fawn, and as to its speed it seems to add wings as it rapidly skims over the summit of each receding hillock, you can but imagine it borne away on the "proud waves" crest.

Turning from this horizon bounded prospect you behold on the other hand, a lazily winding sheet of water, with the blue sky mirrored on its bosom, coming from way off yonder beyond the reach of your keenest sight, and shaping the course of its broad surface around every little hill, which a noisy New England creek would scornfully dash over. Yet this majestic river, (I am speaking of the noble Rock,) in its easy contented dignity holds the even tenor of its way, until it disappears as it came, pitching over no precipice, cringing through no narrows, acknowledging no shallows and chafing over no rocks, but bearing on its calm yet restless current to the great valley river. Numerous flocks of the feathered tribe dot its borders, and from the narrow skirting of woodland comes the too boo woo of the prairie hen, the drumming of the partridge, the shrill note of the thrush, the cry of the whip-poor-will, the plaintive song of the moaning dove with the double bass of monsieur frog, and the intense tenor of the screech owl, while flapping his wings over all these, and striking terror into every heart, soars our nation's emblem, the bald eagle.

Besides all this, there are the beautiful and fragrant flowers with which nature forgot not to embellish the picture. There are large clusters of blue forget-me-nots, the climbing honeysuckle, the haughty columbine, the morning glory, the blushing beauty, the "yellow daisy by the mill," content "to be a daisy still and nothing more," then there is the untidy pond lily, aree an at drop neglige; there are pink and white catch flies, whose innocent little petals have never caught anything save the "tears of night," or the approaching kiss of the honey bee; there are thousands of cupid's darts hurling away at each other for want of human victims; there, conquering unrelies her black eyes in the disc of the none-s-until; modestly hides under the hood of the anemone; there, purity dwells in the bell of the lily, and there too in all its native loveliness, is the emblem of youth, beauty and sweetness, the prairie rose.

These viewed through an atmosphere soft and hazy, with senses intoxicated by draughts of distilled fragrance, calls forth from the inmost soul a feeling of admiration, which we

"Can never express yet cannot all conceal."

Such is the appearance of our prairies in general, and such in particular was the appearance, from Mount Zion, of Rock prairie, now one of the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of the west. No traveler could pass over Mount Zion without pausing to gaze longer on the scene, till his full soul turning from the picture to its great artist would exclaim, "thou God hast created it! It is indeed good!"

YANKEE CELERITY VS. ENGLISH SLOWNESS.—The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, referring to the slowness and torpidity manifested by the allied troops in the campaign against Russia, contrasts it with the brilliancy of manoeuvre and the energy of action of our own troops in the Mexican campaign:

The sluggishness of the movement of the allies does not compare favorably with the activity displayed by General Scott on the expedition against the Mexican capital—an expedition which was directed at about as great a distance from, and in a yet hotter and sicker climate.—On the 7th of March, General Scott embarked with his troops on board the transporting squadron; on the 27th of the same month, Vera Cruz, with the strong castle of San Juan d'Ulloa, was ours, besides 6000 prisoners and 600 pieces of artillery. Within three weeks after the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Perote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession.

Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within as many more it was broke by the Mexicans, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and Gen. Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

When a bank suspends in Australia, they take the president to a neighboring tree and serve him in the same manner.

HYGEANA.
BROUGHT HOME TO THE DOOR OF THE MILLION.

A wonderful discovery has recently been made by Dr. Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of consumption, asthma and all diseases of the lung. We refer to "Dr. Curtis' Hygeana," or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment, a physician remarks: "It is evident that inhaling—constantly breathing an agreeable, healing vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the arisal cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists' throughout the country.—New York Dutchman of Jan. 14.

The Inhaler is worn on the breast under the linen without the least inconvenience—the heat of the body being sufficient to evaporate the fluid.

Hundreds of CASES OF CURES like the following might be named. One Package of Hygeana has cured me of the ASTHMA of six years standing.—Jae. P. Keenberry, P. M. of Duncannon, Pa.

I am cured of the ASTHMA of 10 years standing by Dr. Curtis' Hygeana.—Margaret Estlin, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Paul of No. 5 Mammoth St. N. Y., was cured of a severe case of Bronchitis by the Hygeana.

My sister has been cured of a DISTRESSING COUGH of several years standing, and decided to be incurable by her Physicians. She was CURED IN ONE MONTH by the Hygeana.—J. H. Gaudet, P. M. Richmond, Me.

Price three Dollars a Package.—Sold by CURTIS & PERKINS and HOYD & PAUL, No. 149 Chambers St. N. Y.—4 Packages sent free by express to any part of the United States for Ten Dollars.

17th SENATORIAL DISTRICT CONVENTION.

At the same time and place above designated in the respective towns and wards for meetings, to choose delegates to the county convention, the Republican electors of the wards of the city of Janesville, and of the towns in this county comprised in the 17th senatorial district, are requested to select an equal number of delegates to which they are entitled under the above appointment in the county convention, to represent them in a senatorial convention hereby called at the Court House in Janesville, on THURSDAY the 12th day of October next at 11 o'clock, A. By order of the County Committee.

The adjourned Saratoga anti-Nebraska convention met at Auburn on Tuesday of last week, and adopted the whig state ticket. This manifests the possession of both "sense and honesty," by the anti-Nebraska men of New York, and will show its fruits hereafter.

The convention also passed a resolution to call a national convention at Syracuse next June to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The last returns from Maine report the election of Fuller, the present member, who voted against the Nebraska bill, in the 6th congressional district, by a plurality of 75. Two others, each anti-Nebraska, ran with him, and the majority against him will be nearly 2000.

A WHOLESALE BUSINESS.—The Waukesha Gazette says that a freight train ran through a flock of sheep, at the crossing of the railroad, near the burying ground in that village, and killed twenty-seven, and wounded several others. The sheep were owned by Dr. D. Ensign.

A magnificent cathedral is about being erected in Washington by the Methodists. It is to be one of the most costly and elegantly finished church edifices on the continent. Rev. Henry Slater superintends the finances, and the cornerstone will be laid on the 23d of Oct. next.

It is understood that the Drovers' Bank and the Bank of Carthage, New York, recently suspended, will be reconstituted within a few days. Parties holding notes of these institutions should not sacrifice them.

Justice.—Henry Gauvin, a compositor on the Steele newspaper in Paris, who shot and killed the Abby Gay, near the church of St. Vincent de Paul, in April last, for improper connection with his wife, while officiating as her spiritual adviser, was tried a few days since, and acquitted by the jury in ten minutes.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In noticing a few remarks in your paper relative to a lecture that was delivered the other evening by G. S. Dodge, Esq., before the members of the Collegiate Institute on the subject of the "proper course of reading" for students, we are led into the field of discussion ourselves, to give our views touching some of the principal features of that lecture; and in doing this, we wish to be understood as being entirely aloof from all partiality regarding the merits, or—if it has any—demerits of the same.

To prescribe a proper course of reading for any class of men, is like unto one man prescribing his opinion for another, and is no light task; but to suit the tastes of the majority of that class is difficult in the extreme, and few there be that accomplish it. For inasmuch as men's opinions differ the one from the other, precisely in the same degree do their various views of works. This subject has been discussed by some of the greatest men that grace the pages of our literature, and has been found to be so difficult to treat upon, and find that due appreciation which it ought to receive, that but few have left us any exact rule to follow. Indeed, Johnson, Chesterfield, and Channing, are the only authors that have dwelt considerably on the subject and we are inclined to the opinion that had our friend G. S. Dodge, Esq., chosen other ground to have displayed his ability as a lecturer, we think he would have been more at home and given greater satisfaction to his audience; or had he confined himself within reasonable limits, and selected a few choice books that were most familiar to himself, and such as he could recommend as being suited to the student from among his innumerable collection of authors, and have placed them methodically before the notice of his hearers, he might then have met the desired end and have conferred instruction, instead of wading up to the chin in such deep water, and by an endless chain and repetition of authors, confused the attention of his hearers and vitiated the entire subject. But if it was barely the object of our lecturer to name over a mass of works, irrespective of classification, and leave the student to group among and select for himself out of them his own choice of works for his own instruction, why then we think the lecturer had good taste in selecting his library—(although) we should be inclined to have recommended one or two more works that no doubt would have been equally appreciated by the student—as Dick's works, Goldsmith's histories of England, Rome and Greece; Chesterfield's letters, and Gray's Elegy, and perhaps Josephus—books that are particularly mentioned in the selection given by Johnson and others.) But we understand, at least we should hope, the intention of these lectures to be a criterion for the young, and therefore all possible care should be taken not to vitiate their taste for reading, and great pains taken in avoiding those authors entirely unsuited to the minds of youth, as Byron, Shelley, Holmes, and the like. These are all very well in adult years when the mind is prepared to receive them, but are certainly unfit books for the young. Nor do we think Locke on the Human Understanding a proper book, suited to the capacity of the youth, nor Shakespeare, till after a preparatory course of reading has been gone through.

But time will not permit us to pursue this subject any further, and suffice it to say, that although we must express our unqualified disapprobation to some of the phrases made use of by the lecturer, as "sticking to a book with the tenacity of a bull-dog," "fast women," "town keepers," "members of congress," etc., as being entirely out of place on a subject of this kind, and not according to our taste, exactly "elegant or dignified in style"—we should prefer seeing the same lecture in a more concentrated form, and have prescribed in more definite limits the books for a proper course of reading.

Yours, SPECTATOR.

The following, perhaps too florid, yet beautifully written description, first appeared in the North Carolina Republican. It is from the pen of a young lady, formerly resident in this city:

A WISCONSIN PRAIRIE.—Reader, have you never beheld a Badger State prairie? Then go, and view one of nature's sublime handi-works. Go, and rest your eye, not upon a dead level as many imagine, but upon, as it were, a variegated, heaving sea, whose recently agitated waters are just calming themselves in smothered swells. Place yourself on the largest one of these, it is well worth your effort, and observe the gentle undulations gradually growing smaller and smaller like receding waves. So perfectly formed you can hardly believe they are not waves, covered as they are, with tall "broeze-riden" herbage, and as free from bush or tree as the sea itself, except here and there a circular grove of white oaks and silver leaf poplar, which seem to have drawn up their forces in this form to better withstand the attack of the fire, which annually blasts the oakish aspirations of many a sprouting acorn. By the side of one of these prairie islands, to make the picture of the sea still more complete, you see, what is it? a marine animal? It is very like one, with its rounded back just discernible in the tops of the high grass, but as it raises its head and bounds away in terror you at once recognize the timid fawn, and as to its speed it seems to add wings as it rapidly skims over the summit of each receding hillock, you can but imagine it borne away on the "proud waves" crest.

Turning from this horizon bounded prospect you behold on the other hand, a lazily winding sheet of water, with the blue sky mirrored on its bosom, coming from way off yonder beyond the reach of your keenest sight, and shaping the course of its broad surface around every little hill, which a noisy New England creek would scornfully dash over. Yet this majestic river, (I am speaking of the noble Rock,) in its easy contented dignity holds the even tenor of its way, until it disappears as it came, pitching over no precipice, cringing through no narrow, acknowledging no shallows and chafing over no rocks, but bearing on its calm yet restless current to the great valley river. Numerous flocks of the feathered tribe dot its borders, and from the narrow skirting of woodland comes the too boo woo of the prairie hen, the drumming of the partridge, the shrill note of the thrush, the cry of the whip-poorwill, the plaintive song of the mourning dove with the double bass of monsieur frog, and the intense tenor of the screech owl, while flapping his wings over all these, and striking terror into every heart, soars our nation's emblem, the bald eagle.

Besides all this, there are the beautiful and fragrant flowers with which nature forgot not to embellish the picture. There are large clusters of blue forget-me-nots, the climbing honeysuckle, the haughty columbine, the morning glory, the blushing beauty, the "yellow daisy by the mill," content "to be a daisy still and nothing more," then there is the untidy pond lily, aree at trop negligee; there are pink and white catch flies, whose innocent little petals have never caught anything save the "tears of night," or the approaching kiss of the honey bee; there are thousands of cupid's darts hurling away at each other for want of human victims; there, conquering unrelies her black eyes in the disc of the none-s-until; modestly hides under the hood of the anemone; there, purity dwells in the bell of the lily, and there too in all its native loveliness, is the emblem of youth, beauty and sweetness, the prairie rose.

These viewed through an atmosphere soft and hazy, with senses intoxicated by draughts of distilled fragrance, calls forth from the inmost soul a feeling of admiration, which we

"Can never express yet cannot all conceal."

Such is the appearance of our prairies in general, and such in particular was the appearance, from Mount Zion, of Rock prairie, now one of the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of the west. No traveler could pass over Mount Zion without pausing to gaze longer on the scene, till his full soul turning from the picture to its great artist would exclaim, "thou God hast created it! It is indeed good!"

MATHEWS' CELEBRATED VENETIAN LIQUID HAIR DYE, OF ONE PREPARATION.

THE article manufactured under the above title, is entirely different from and possesses characteristics of excellence not known to any other Hair Dye in use, viz.

SAFETY. It is entirely free from all injurious properties in its application—not injuring or even impairing the gloss or texture of the finest and most delicate hair.

VARIETY AND BEAUTY OF COLOR. Any shade can be produced from a Light Brown to a Jet Black; restoring Gray Hair to its original color, and matching Light or Red Hair with any desired darker shade, which will not Fade, Crack, or wash out, leaving the hair soft and in appearance perfectly natural.

CONVENIENCE. This Dye is put up in one bottle, and in this way avoids the inconvenience of having two or three separate liquids to apply. While in use, the mixing, and a slight mistake as to the proper time of applying these separate liquids always defeats the end desired.

CHEAPNESS, &c. This is the cheapest Liquid Hair Dye in use, the bottle containing double that of any other manufacturer, besides being sold at half the price. It will not color the skin, proper attention being paid to the ample directions accompanying each bottle.

YANKEE CELERITY VS. ENGLISH SLOWNESS.—The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, referring to the slowness and torpidity manifested by the allied troops in the campaign against Russia, contrasts it with the brilliancy of manoeuvre and the energy of action of our own troops in the Mexican campaign:

The sluggishness of the movement of the allies does not compare favorably with the activity displayed by General Scott on the expedition against the Mexican capital—an expedition which was directed at about as great a distance from, and in a yet hotter and sicker climate.—On the 7th of March, General Scott embarked with his troops on board the transporting squadron; on the 27th of the same month, Vera Cruz, with the strong castle of San Juan d'Ulloa, was ours, besides 6000 prisoners and 600 pieces of artillery. Within three weeks after the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Perote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession. &c.

Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within as many more it was broke by the Mexicans, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and Gen. Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

HYGEANA.

BROUGHT HOME TO THE DOOR OF THE MILLION.

A wonderful discovery has recently been made by Dr. Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of consumption, asthma and all diseases of the lung. We refer to "Dr. Curtis' Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment, a physician remarks: "It is evident that inhaling—constantly breathing an agreeable, healing vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the arid cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists' throughout the country.—New York Dutchman of Jan. 14.

The Inhaler is worn on the breast under the linen without the least inconvenience—the heat of the body being sufficient to evaporate the fluid.

Hundreds of CASES OF CURE by the following might be named. One Package of Hygeana has cured me of the ASTHMA of six years standing.—Jae. P. Keenberry, P. M. of Duncannon, Pa.

I am cured of the ASTHMA of 10 years standing by Dr. Curtis' Hygeana.—Margaret Estlin, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Paul of No. 5 Mammoth St. N. Y., was cured of a severe case of Bronchitis by the Hygeana.

My sister has been cured of a DISTRESSING COUGH of several years standing, and decided to be incurable by her Physicians. She was CURED IN ONE MONTH by the Hygeana.—J. H. Gaudet, P. M. Richmond, Me.

Price three Dollars a Package.—Sold by CURTIS & PERKINS and HOYD & PAUL, No. 149 Chambers St. N. Y.—A Package sent free by express to any part of the United States for Ten Dollars.

N. B.—Dr. Curtis' Hygeana is the ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE ARTICLE, all others are mere imitations or vile and INJURIOUS counterfeits. Shun them as you would POISON.

The adjourned Saratoga anti-Nebraska convention met at Auburn on Tuesday of last week, and adopted the whig state ticket. This manifests the possession of both "sense and honesty" by the anti-Nebraska men of New York, and will show its fruits hereafter.

The convention also passed a resolution to call a national convention at Syracuse next June to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The last returns from Maine report the election of Fuller, the present member, who voted against the Nebraska bill, in the 6th congressional district, by a plurality of 75. Two others, each anti-Nebraska, ran with him, and the majority against him will be nearly 2000.

A WHOLESALE BUSINESS.—The Waukesha Gazette says that a freight train ran through a flock of sheep, at the crossing of the railroad, and killed twenty-seven, and wounded several others. The sheep were owned by Dr. D. Ensign.

The know nothings of Cincinnati have had a regular fare up and many of its most influential members have broke the track. What it is all about we are sure we "don't know."

Dr. John Mitchell lectures this evening before the Collegiate Institute. Subject: Discipline—the duty of parents and teachers.

The friends of Mr. Collins in Madison had a torch light procession Friday night in honor of his election.

A magnificent cathedral is about being erected in Washington by the Methodists. It is to be one of the most costly and elegantly finished church edifices on the continent. Rev. Henry Steier superintends the finances, and the cornerstone will be laid on the 23d of Oct. next.

It is understood that the Drovers' Bank and the Bank of Carthage, New York, recently suspended, will be reconstituted within a few days. Parties holding notes of these institutions should not sacrifice them.

Justice.—Henry Gauvin, a compositor on the Sicile newspaper in Paris, who shot and killed the Abby Gay, near the church of St. Vincent de Paul, in April last, for improper connection with his wife, while officiating as her spiritual adviser, was tried a few days since, and acquitted by the jury in ten minutes.

Masses. Editors:—In noticing a few remarks in your paper relative to a lecture that was delivered the other evening by G. S. Dodge, Esq., before the members of the Collegiate Institute on the subject of the "proper course of reading" for students, we are led into the field of discussion ourselves, to give our views touching some of the principal features of that lecture; and in doing this, we wish to be understood as being entirely aloof from all partiality regarding the merits, or—if it has any—demerits of the same.

To prescribe a proper course of reading for any class of men, is like unto one man prescribing his opinion for another, and is no light task; but to suit the tastes of the majority of that class is difficult in the extreme, and few there be that accomplish it. For inasmuch as men's opinions differ the one from the other, precisely in the same degree do their various views of works. This subject has been discussed by some of the greatest men that grace the pages of our literature, and has been found to be so difficult to treat upon, and find that due appreciation which it ought to receive, that but few have left us any exact rule to follow. Indeed, Johnson, Chesterfield, and Channing, are the only authors that have dwelt considerably on the subject and we are inclined to the opinion that had our friend G. S. Dodge, Esq., chosen other ground to have displayed his ability as a lecturer, we think he would have been more at home and given greater satisfaction to his audience; or had he confined himself within reasonable limits, and selected a few choice books that were the most familiar to himself, and such as he could recommend as being suited to the student from among his innumerable collection of authors, and have placed them methodically before the notice of his hearers, he might then have met the desired end and have conferred instruction, instead of wading up to the chin in such deep water, and by an endless chain and repetition of authors, confused the attention of his hearers and violated the entire subject. But if it was barely the object of our lecturer to name over a mass of works, irrespective of classification, and leave the student to group among and select for himself out of them his own choice of works for his own instruction, why then we think the lecturer had good taste in selecting his library.—(although we should be inclined to have recommended one or two more works that no doubt would have been equally appreciated by the student—as Dick's works, Goldsmith's histories of England, Rome and Greece; Chesterfield's letters, and Gray's Elegy, and perhaps Josephus—books that are particularly mentioned in the selection given by Johnson and others.) But we understand, at least we should hope, the intention of these lectures to be a criterion for the young, and therefore all possible care should be taken not to vitiate their taste for reading, and great pains taken in avoiding those authors entirely unsuited to the minds of youth, as Byron, Shelley, Holmes, and the like. These are all very well in adult years when the mind is prepared to receive them, but are certainly unfit books for the young. Nor do we think Locke on the Human Understanding a proper book, suited to the capacity of the youth, nor Shakespeare, till after a preparatory course of reading has been gone through.

But time will not permit us to pursue this subject any further, and suffice it to say, that although we must express our unqualified disapprobation to some of the phrases made use of by the lecturer, as "sticking to a book with the tenacity of a bull-dog," "fast women," "town keepers," "members of congress," etc., as being entirely out of place on a subject of this kind, and not according to our taste, exactly "elegant or dignified in style"—we should prefer seeing the same lecture in a more concentrated form, and have prescribed in more definite limits the books for a proper course of reading.

Yours, SPECTATOR.

The following, perhaps too florid, yet beautifully written description, first appeared in the North Carolina Republican. It is from the pen of a young lady, formerly resident in this city:

A WISCONSIN PRAIRIE.—Reader, have you ever beheld a Badger State prairie? Then go, and view one of nature's sublimest handi-works. Go, and rest your eye, not upon a dead level as many imagine, but upon, as it were, a variegated, heaving sea, whose recently agitated waters are just calming themselves in smothered swells. Place yourself on the largest one of these, it is well worth your effort, and observe the gentle undulations gradually growing smaller and smaller like receding waves. So perfectly formed you can hardly believe they are not waves, covered as they are, with tall "breeze-riden" berberges, and as free from bush or tree as the sea itself, except here and there a circular grove of white oaks and silver leaf poplar, which seem to have drawn up their forces in this form to better withstand the attack of the fire, which annually blasts the oakish aspirations of many a sprouting acorn. By the side of one of these prairie islands, to make the picture of the sea still more complete, you see, what is it? A marine animal? It is very like one, with its rounded back just discernible in the tops of the high grass, but as it raises its head and bounds away in terror you at once recognize the timid fawn, and as to its speed it seems to add wings as it rapidly skims over the summit of each receding hillock, you can but imagine it borne away on the "proud waves" crest.

Turning from this horizon bounded prospect you behold on the other hand, a lazily winding sheet of water, with the blue sky mirrored on its bosom, coming from way off yonder beyond the reach of your keenest sight, and shaping the course of its broad surface around every little hill, which a noisy New England creek would scornfully dash over. Yet this majestic river, (I am speaking of the noble Rock), in its easy complacent dignity holds the even tenor of its way, until it disappears as it came, pitching over no precipice, cringing through no narrow, acknowledging no shallows and chafing over no rocks, but bearing on its calm yet resistless current to the great valley river. Numerous flocks of the feathered tribe dot its borders, and from the narrow skirting of woodland comes the too booo woo of the prairie hen, the drumming of the partridge, the shrill note of the thrush, the cry of the whip-poor-will, the plaintive song of the mourning dove with the double bass of monsieur frog, and the intense tenor of the screech owl, while flapping his wings over all these, and striking terror into every heart, soars our nation's emblem, the bald eagle.

Besides all this, there are the beautiful and fragrant flowers with which nature forgot not to embellish the picture. There are large clusters of blue forget-me-nots, the climbing honeysuckle, the haughty columbine, the morning glory, the blushing beauty, the "yellow daisy by the mill," content "to be a daisy still and nothing more," then there is the untidy pond lily, aree an at rap negligee; there are pink and white catch flies, whose innocent little petals have never caught anything save the "tears of night," or the approaching kiss of the honey bee; there are thousands of cupid's darts lurking away at each other for want of human victims; there, coquetry unveils her black eyes in the disc of the none-so-pretty; modesty hides under the hood of the anemone; there, purity dwells in the bell of the lily, and there too in all its native loveliness, is the emblem of youth, beauty and sweetness, the prairie rose.

These viewed through an atmosphere soft and hazy, with senses intoxicated by draughts of distilled fragrance, calls forth from the inmost soul a feeling of admiration, which we

"Can ne'er express yet cannot all conceal."

Such is the appearance of our prairies in general, and such in particular was the appearance, from Mount Zion, of Rockprairie, now one of the wealthiest and most thickly settled portions of the west. No traveler could pass over Mount Zion without pausing to gaze longer on the scene, till his full soul turning from the picture to its great artist would exclaim, "thou God hast created it! It is indeed good!"

TRAVELER.

YANKEE CLEVERLY vs. ENGLISH SLOWNESS.

The N. Y. Courier & Enquirer, referring to the slowness and torpidity manifested by the allied troops in the campaign against Russia, contrasts it with the brilliancy of manoeuvre and the energy of action of our own troops in the Mexican campaign:

The sluggishness of the movement of the allies does not compare favorably with the activity displayed by General Scott on the expedition against the Mexican capital—an expedition which was directed at about as great a distance from, and in a yet hotter and sicker climate.—On the 7th of March, General Scott embarked with his troops on board the transporting squadron; on the 27th of the same month, Vera Cruz, with the strong castle of San Juan d'Ulloa, was ours, besides 6000 prisoners and 500 pieces of artillery. Within three weeks after, the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Parote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession.

Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within as many more it was broke by the Mexicans, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and then Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

When a bank suspends in Australia, they take the president to a neighboring tree and serve him in the same manner.

Within three weeks after, the victory of Cerro Gordo was won; within four days after Parote, the second fortress in Mexico, was taken, and within three weeks Puebla, the second city in Mexico, lying half way between Vera Cruz and the capital was in our possession.

Negotiations were now opened, and peace offered. Actual hostilities were suspended for three months and a half. Again Scott moved on. In less than two weeks the bloody battles of Contreras and Churubusco were fought, within three days an armistice was concluded, and within as many more it was broke by the Mexicans, and within a week after, Melinos del Rey was stormed and carried; within a week after, the battle of Chapultepec, and the battles of Mexico were fought, and then Scott made his entrance into the conquered city of the Aztecs; and that expedition, which the London Times had previously ridiculed as an enterprise of stark madness, had reached its glorious consummation.

When a bank suspends in Australia, they take the president to a neighboring tree and serve him in the same manner.

MATHEWS'

CELEBRATED VENETIAN
LIQUID HAIR DYE,

OF ONE PREPARATION.

THE article manufactured under the above title, is entirely different from and possesses characteristics of excellence not known to any other Hair Dye in use, viz.

SAFETY.

It is entirely free from all injurious properties in its application—not injuring or even impairing the gloss or texture of the finest and most delicate hair.

VARIETY AND BEAUTY OF COLOR.

Any shade can be produced from a Light Brown to a Jet Black; restoring Gray Hair to its original color, and matching Light or Red Hair with any desired darker shade, which will not Fade, Croak, or wash out, leaving the hair soft and in appearance perfectly natural.

CONVENIENCE.

This Dye is put up in one bottle, and in this way avoids the inconvenience of having two or three separate liquids to apply, which is very perplexing, and a little mistake as to the proper time of applying these separate liquids always defeats the end desired.

CHEAPNESS, &c.

This is the cheapest Liquid Hair Dye in use, the bottle containing double that of any other manufacturer, besides being sold at half the price. It will not color the skin, proper attention being paid to the ample directions accompanying each bottle.

This valuable preparation can be found in Janesville, only at the Empire Drug Store.

BROUGHT HOME TO THE DOOR OF THE MILLION.

A wonderful discovery has recently been made by Dr. Curtis, of this city, in the treatment of consumption, asthma and all diseases of the lung. We refer to "Dr. Curtis' Hygeana, or Inhaling Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment, a physician remarks: It is evident that inhaling—constantly breathing an agreeable, healing vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the arial cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at all the druggists' throughout the country.—New York Dutchman of Jan. 14.

The Inhaler is worn on the breast under the linen without the least inconvenience—the heat of the body being sufficient to evaporate the fluid.

Hundreds of CASES of CURES like the following might be named. One Package of Hygeana has cured me of the ASTHMA of six years standing.—Just P. Keeberry, P. M. of Dunellen, Pa.

I am cured of the ASTHMA of 10 years standing by Dr. Curtis' Hygeana.—Margaret Euston, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mr. Paul, of No. 5 Mammoth St., N. Y., was cured of a severe case of Bronchitis by the Hygeana.

My sister has been cured of a DISTRESSING COUGH of several years standing, and decided to be incurable by her Physicians. She was CURED IN ONE MONTH by the Hygeana.—J. H. Gubert, P. M., Richmond, Me.

Price three Dollars a Package.—Sold by CURTIS & PERKINS and BOYD & PAUL, No. 149 Chambers St., N. Y.—Packets sent free by express to any part of the United States for Ten Dollars.

N. B.—Dr. Curtis' Hygeana is the ORIGINAL and ONLY GENUINE ARTICLE, all others are base imitations or vile and INJURIOUS counterfeits. Shun them as you would POISON.
